Class Will

We, the Seniors of '61, with sound minds do hereby solemnly swear that this is our last will and testament:

I, Jerry Hedlund, a mighty senior am I, do will my place to some lucky junior guy.

I, Sherry Belnap, will my happy hours on the Newspaper and Annual Staff to Nancy Hatfield.

I, Pat Gifford, bequeath the Tacan site to whoever wants it after April 17, 1961.

I, Marilyn Browning, hereby bequeath my happy hours in Algebra II to Jackie Thompson, and my old dirty locker to Gretchen Abbott, hoping she will keep it cleaner than I did.

I, Harry Gregoire, bequeath my unfinished activities to anyone having the time to finish them.

I, Donald Bellamy, leave my leftover assignments to my brother, Ray, and hope he can finish them.

I, Jerry Wieber, in my last will and testament, bequeath my ability to be Student Council president to Judy Kramer and all my "goofs" to my "loving" brother, Ronnie, in hope that he may learn something from them.

I, Beverly Edlund, will my many shorthand hours spent with Miss Bassett to Sharon Hatfield.

I, Jim Graham, don't will nothin' to nobody, 'cause I'm takin' it all with me.

I, Priscilla Smith, hereby bequeath my ability to brown nose to Rosa Lea Bolton. She's going to need it!

I, Lois Waddell, will to my cousin, Judy Engel, my ability to make Winter Carnival Queen speeches and the ability to drop a subtle hint or two.

I, Gary Sentman, as part of the basketball team, will my old, dirty locker to Dave Sanders.

I, Bill Bishop, give my last two prize possessions away. To Pete O'Donnell I will my striped trunks which are very dear to me. To Mr. Wilttrout, I will my last possession, my small black booklet which contains all the girls' names and addresses who live in Homer.

I, Gordon Meekins, hereby bequeath my dear ol' track shoes to all those fast boys that chase girls.

I, Tom Baumgartner, will my locker to my brother, who wanted one of his own so badly, he went and started using someone else's.

I, Linda Hunt, a ring have I, do will myself to my fiancée only--the wonderful guy.

Class Prophecy

THE YEAR: 2020. THE PLACE: Old Folks' Home, Homer, Alaska. SCENE: Porch of said home. PEOPLE: Occupants of sixteen Kennedy rocking chairs, rocking steadily. THE TIME: A time of reminiscing.

Alaska has become largely a young people's land, and a law has been passed that every person over 70 has to return to the place of his high school graduation and enter the old home which is called Institution for the Learned Ancient.

These sixteen rocking old folks are the illustrious Class of '61--rocking, rocking, rocking--remembering.

The only old maid of the group, Priscilla Smith, quaveringly remembers the days of her glory as research chemist and her success in concocting a breakfast food which contained all food elements for survival. What matter, it left a vile taste in the mouth! Jerry Wieber interrupts, a bit rudely, recalling his days as Navy Commander of the Homer fleet (50 in number) and a tear rolls down his cheek as he rocks a bit faster. Sherry Belnap, her white hair carefully set and bleached in the latest fashion, preens a trifle as she recalls the highlights of her years as fashion model and is looked at with approval by the nine males of the old 1961 graduation class.

Bill Bishop leaps (?) from his chair to illustrate the fine arts of basketball, but falls back (basket not completed) in exhaustion.

Linda Hunt happily chirps of her time as airline stewardess on Arctic Balloons operated by Tom Baumgartner, flown by Tom Baumgartner, and finally blown up by Tom Baumgartner.

Marilyn Browning rocks vigorously as she recalls when she headed the staff of the farthest north hospital whose main drawback was that it lacked patients, except for the time Tom B., Linda H., and passengers landed unceremoniously in the front yard of the institution.

Lois Waddell shows pictures of children and grandchildren. She fondly named her quadruplets Bill, William, Willy, and Willis, all after her husband. Pat Gifford notes that she too had her days assisting her husband in Tacan research. (She always did like Tacan!)

Harry Gregoire, glorious in his bright National Guard uniform which he wears each day (and sometimes even in his sleep), tells of his part in Alaska History--called the Homer Guard Retreat.

Also attired in uniform and bald (he shaved his head once too often) Jimmy Graham struts as he fights again the battle of Merchant Marine versus National Guard. No one won; it was a tie.

In the far corner of the porch old-time wrestler Gary Sentman wrestles feebly with Jerry Hedlund and both are conked vigorously on their heads and sent back to their rockers by Beverly Edlund who commands this little establishment. She had retired from the restaurant business sometime previously.

Don Bellamy refused to brag on his days as Olympic skiing champion, but is surrounded by his trophies which never leave his side.

The last old man in the seediest rocking chair of all, Gordon Meekins, brings the old people to the present by enlisting their help in his garden plans for the institution. Each will have his own plot. Gordon was once Chief Agricultural Agent for all of Alaska. His grandiose plans are viewed with distaste by the old people and they pointedly ignore him, nodding and rocking and finally sleeping, sleeping.

Many activities were brought about because of the junior class. The purpose of all money-making projects was to acquire sufficient funds to have a beautiful Junior-Senior Prom.

The activities were numerous. Concessions at the basketball games, dances, a car-wash, a carnival, and candy sales were among them.

Junior class members bought their own rings with a blue sunburst setting with graduation year and initials on a gold setting.

The Freshmen Class held a Christmas party and, later in the year, a candy sale. At the Christmas party class members sang carols, danced, exchanged gifts, and enjoyed refreshments. The purpose of the candy sale was to help the cheerleaders raise money for their uniforms. This project proved to be a big success--a $15 profit.

Dave and Lois we decide.

Dressed so neat for every affair,
Linda and Tim know what to wear.

Tom and Priscilla who strive and labor,
The brightest among us deserve a big favor.

Jim and Ruby with lively feet,
Our best dancers can pick up the beat.

Marilyn and Bruce in all subjects supreme,
In the studious field they'll always be seen.

Sherry and Jim so courteous and polite,
Do make a most admirable sight.

Advisory School Board

Through enactment by the 1960 Alaska State Legislature provision was made for the establishment of advisory school boards to assist and advise the State Board of Education and the State Department of Education. The intent of this Act was to allow for some degree of local policy determination in an advisory capacity in those areas where schools are maintained solely by the State of Alaska. The law provided for the advisory board to consist of three members in each area served by a rural school operated by the State Department of Education.

The election of these members to the Homer Board was held on October 10, 1960. Since this election was the first advisory school board election, the term of each member was determined by the drawing of three numbers, one by each member. The person drawing number one, Mr. Kolar, shall serve the remainder of the 1960-61 year to April, 1961, plus one full year ending in April, 1962. The member drawing number two, Ed Rehder, shall serve the remainder of the 1960-61 year, plus two full years ending in April, 1963. The member drawing number three, Milton Turkington, shall serve the remainder of the 1960-61, plus three full years ending April, 1964.

Mr. Kolar was named as chairman of the group, and Mr. Turkington as secretary.
